

SPIRITUAL REFLECTIONS AND EXCHANGES ON THE GROWING THREAT OF ESCALATION OF THE ONGOING GLOBAL CONFLICTS.

Question: The World is on the brink of a major shift. How much hope can we place on international agencies, like the United Nations, to stem the tide?

Answer: Unfortunately, the UN appears to be on the same slide into oblivion as the League of Nations. Increasingly, its pronouncements are meaningless gestures that are not respected by its powerful members. It is needless to give examples of current and ongoing events to substantiate this outlook. Anyone who wishes can see for themselves.

Question: So, what can be done to avert the collision course?

Answer: At this point, only a mighty and simultaneous catastrophe, natural perhaps, that completely debilitates the countries who are gearing to embark on this course can prevent the onslaught. Appealing to the conscience, decency or humanity of their leaders is not likely to yield any results. Perhaps, there might be another Berlin-like conference in which the superpowers will have a seat at the table, to divvy up the rest of the world into their own respective colonies, so that the wolves do not turn on each other, but instead focus on the prey.

Question: No real solutions have emerged for solving the problems on earth, notice I said the earth, not the world.

Answer: No real solutions have emerged because those who propose “solutions” or enforce a truce are only interested in gaining advantage with their proposals or “solutions”.

Comment: The earth is real, but the world is what people have in their head, perceptions, which may not be real...

Response: Perceptions drive and determine our actions. They are very real to the perceiver, even if onlookers cannot see or share them. It is a gross mistake, on the part of those who consider themselves advanced thinkers to ignore this fact. In the hopes, perhaps, that these perceptions will suddenly disappear.

Comment: ...There is so much misinformation and manipulation going on for the mind of the masses ...

Response: Who is doing the misinforming and manipulating? And why is it that after millennia of the same trickery the masses are still “falling” for it? Why is it that history, ancient and modern, show, invariably, the same traits within the crop of new leaders who successfully overthrow their erstwhile oppressors. Not even Theocracy is immune from this. Think of the history of the successors to the Apostles of Jesus, dating back to even as early as 200 years after their death (i.e. 300 AD). These successors were, after all, members of the same masses who were misinformed and manipulated by the previous “wicked” leaders. May be this is evidence that the rot is much deeper than we are willing to accept. Perhaps too, the number of the truly innocent among the masses is miniscule, which explains the very low statistical probability of their being a critical mass in any new government formed by invitation or by force.

Ultimately, the leaders determine the fate of the world. Those not in leadership can only follow, influence or oppose.

Question: So, what is the hope for the World and the Earth?

Answer: I don't see much hope for the world, as we know or think of it today. Neither the existing leaders, or the many waiting in the wings to assume or overthrow are interested in anything but themselves. World leaders have been and still are ever ready to tear the world and their countries apart to attain their goals. They do not, and have not seen the interconnectedness of the world. And there is nothing visibly happening to give one hope. The anguish expressed by many, including the masses, is for alleviation from suffering, not out of conviction that if given the same opportunity they would not do the same.

The Earth is a different matter. We are creatures like any other on Earth. If the owner of Earth determines mankind's activities is taking the Earth to the brink of extinction, my logic, supported by prophecy, tells me that mankind will become the disposable element in the equation. Hopefully some will survive the massive destruction that will be required to thoroughly cleanse the Earth in such a way as to ensure that any survivors will not harbor traits that have plagued the Earth for millennia. Hopefully, these will now rebuild a World in accord with the Will of its Owner and benefactor.

Question: Are you saying the world is a stage and we are all actors on that stage. Therefore, we should not take ourselves too seriously? Afterall, we have had so many interesting 'roles' through the millennia.

Answer: On the contrary, if we run the risk of being eliminated, what could be more serious than that. But whether we appreciate the seriousness of being on the world stage and the different roles that we have played, is left to the individual. Sages, prophets and even Jesus have stressed this over and over again. Since we refuse to listen, the laws will swing into effect. No one today can claim ignorance in this matter, or justifiably continue with a laissez-faire attitude to life.

Question: So, what happens when the Laws of Creation swing into effect, as the consequence of noncompliance?

Answer: That which does not comply is eventually recycled... reduced to its basic elements in order to take on new form. But, being reduced to its basic elements means a complete obliteration of the once existing structure. In effect reverting to the formless and indistinct primeval energy. For the human spirit it means obliteration of whatever consciousness it has gained or developed in the course of its existence. It ceases to exist. Thus, it is not the spirit or person that is being recycled.

This is the seriousness that I mean, and the laissez-faire attitude that I refer to, when we describe or see life as an eternal manifestation of relative realities or stages and states of consciousness. This latter condition is only true for nondisruptive entities that are swinging in synch with the laws of creation, because creation supports varieties. It does not support disruption. And man is undoubtedly disruptive.

Question: Does this mean that those who are too far gone to rescue, make it back as new Spirit germs?

Answer: Nothing that goes through the disintegration process can make it back as a conscious entity. It's like falling into a Black Hole, and the only exit is dispersal, out of the White Hole, as formless primeval energy<sup>1</sup>.

Thus, the mechanism is that those who are too far gone will be swept into a Spiritual disintegration funnel, while those who can still be rescued will be given the opportunity to continue to use the cleansed and revitalized Earth for their continuing spiritual development. But this time, strictly monitored by the laws.

This is what The Bible has described as the final Judgement. So too do the Koran, and other sacred texts.

Question: What do you see as the role of the spiritually awakened in this process, and how do they survive in this scenario?

Answer: All the evidence points to the fact that we are interconnected and interdependent, one body. When that body is pulling in different directions, the part with greater force either pulls the rest along, or the body breaks apart, a separation occurs.

The spiritually awakened can, if consciously focused, exercise a greater force that can pull the rest in the opposite direction of the present trajectory. But their awakening needs to be more conscious than its present manifestation. It has to be such as described by the term: “Faith that moves mountains”

Realistically speaking, this is not the case, nor do many of the “spiritually awake” today know how to call up such force within. Therefore, the best they too can hope is that the break that occurs will be such that the remaining pieces will be allowed to be united again, at a later time when the forces are realigned to the Laws of Creation. In the meantime, they will have to do what they can, to hold on to their faith, and not allow themselves to succumb during the turbulence, and be swept away.

Question: The scenario we are discussing seems to be repeated throughout written history, and mankind have simply regrouped to repeat the cycle again and again.

Answer: Your observation is correct. Seen from the perspective of human time scale, these events appear interminable. But seen from a Spiritual perspective, what we call a long time is only a moment in Eternal Time. When we consider or appreciate that A Spiritual Age, a unit of the astrological or spiritual measurement of Time, is approximately equivalent to 360,000 earth years, then what we observe as a long time of man’s disruptive activities on Earth becomes, in the scheme of things, a blip in the cosmic time scale. Thus, indeed the Laws quickly dispel and eradicate anything that is disruptive in the mechanism of Creation.

This hopefully gives insight into Peter 3:8–9 which reads: “But do not forget this one thing, dear friends: With the Lord a day is like a thousand years, and a thousand years are like a day”. Another indication that The Lord is not slow in keeping his promise. Or that Creation is slow in reacting to disruptive activity, as many understand slowness.
